the average person When global temperatures rise, there will be more extremes of weather – and they could also mean the difference between life and death for many of us. As temperatures rise and the ice caps melt, sea levels rise, and that land is transformed by thawing permafrost, we can expect more extremes: heatwaves, floods and droughts are likely to become more common. This impacts us now, but what about in the future? How likely is it that we'll be able to cope with more extreme weather in a world with more warming? The answer depends on the year.

For 2019, climate change is boosting the odds of an extreme weather event. Whether you live in Europe, the US or the UK, chances of experiencing a flood, heatwave or thunderstorm, or the very least a severe KEYMACRO is a plugin for Microsoft Word which gives the user the ability to control macros using the keyboard. Simply put, it is a program that makes macros work with you rather than against you. In other words, it allows you to program macros that can be executed directly from the keyboard, skipping the need to use the mouse. As a result, you can get your work done with much less effort and time. From the beginning, the developers have made it very easy to use. Simply by registering your Macros with the program, you can save the macros you use on a custom-built database. Furthermore, the programmer provided the user with various options that allow users to control the functionality of the macros, whether you want to launch macros on key press, mouse click or both. Besides that, the program allows you to program

Keystrokes that will be sent to the application when a specific key is pressed. This functionality works like a button press, but is programmable in your own way.
