Former Army Nurse Alleges Rape, Abuses at Walter Reed NEW YORK — A former Army nurse stationed at Walter Reed Army Medical Center who was given early release from the military following her arrest on charges of having sex with underage soldiers alleges she was sexually abused while she worked at the hospital, according to court papers. ADVERTISEMENT

ADVERTISEMENT Hearst Newspapers quoted former nurse Linda White as saying that she was raped by her supervisor. White is now a registered nurse in Detroit. The unidentified supervisor "told her it was all right to do it, and I believed him and I let him do it," she told the paper. White is alleging she was raped multiple times while assigned to a special-care unit at Walter Reed in May 2002, the paper said. The paper reported that the Army decided to move White to a civilian job in the ward shortly after the alleged incidents. The paper also quoted White's attorney as saying that his client was sent to Walter Reed after telling superiors about the alleged sexual abuse. "They were told that was the reason for her early discharge from the Army," the lawyer, Arthur Aidala, said. Aidala

added that White has been receiving treatment for post-
