* All of Photoshop's operations are available at the keyboard, so you need to learn keyboard shortcuts to be as fast and flexible as possible with Photoshop. Get a good set of Photoshop keyboard shortcuts from a book on the market or a computer store or buy a cheap one online (for example, see the online section at www.amazon.com), and it will quickly pay for itself. * You can quickly find menus by using the keyboard shortcut that corresponds with them (for example, the menu key [1] by default; [F] to access the File menu; and [D] to open the Help menu). * Photoshop has a built-in dictionary with descriptive terms, so you don't have to look up terms in a dictionary. You can use the [Shift] + [Ctrl] + [D] function to look up a word. You can open a dictionary window in Photoshop via the Window menu (Figure 3-3, image \d)). Figure 3-3. You can enlarge or shrink the dictionary window via the Window menu (a) by using the keyboard shortcut Shift+F10, image (b), or the mouse by clicking with the left mouse button (c). The context menu shows the option to toggle the window to be either small (a) or large (d). You can do the same thing via the keyboard shortcut Shift+F10 with image (d). Figure 3-4. Photoshop's graphic state controls include the view, selection, and layer options. You can open the graphic state controls via the View menu's Graphic State submenu, image (a); the Selection menu's Graphic State submenu, image (b); and the Layers menu's Graphic State submenu, image (c). To set the color of specific areas of an image, you use the Select Color command in Photoshop, which is the same as copying color between the layers. You can combine selecting areas in different layers and leaving other parts of the layer intact (image (c) in Figure 3-5). You can also make edits to a layer's appearance by using the Eyedropper tool (shown in the figure) as a paint bucket to sample an area's color. The color from the Eyedropper tool is the paint color for a specified layer, including the layer's background color. You can sample color from multiple layers in Photoshop. The Eyedropper tool is available in the Tools panel via the Brush button (Figure

If you want to make an animated video, don't be worried about the tools. Elements will do everything for you. When I take a photo, I often have it printed. Is it possible to save it to file on my computer, and then print it? It is possible. Do you need a portfolio of your work? No problem. Elements will create the web pages for you. This series helps you to learn different aspects of Photoshop. In the following series, you will learn how to edit images in Photoshop Elements. Using an image you have already saved to a file You have the photo you want to edit in your desktop. You can open it and edit it, but you don't have the tools you want in Elements. Can we use the save function in Photoshop Elements to save the changes you have made to the photo? You can, but it will only save the current state of the photo. We need to make the changes, but save them to the original file. How can we do that? In Elements, we can use the library. Open the file you want to edit and select the Library icon in the top right corner (the magnifying glass). Click on the + button in the bottom left corner and a menu will appear. Click on Images > images. You will now see the library. Select your photo, and click on the copy button. Go back to your desktop and open the file you want to edit. Go to File > Save As. Select the destination where you want to save the file. If you want to get the original quality of the image, then choose the original file. Otherwise, you can choose any quality that you want. Click on Save, and if you are prompted to confirm 05a79cecff

Q: How to scale down the font size of a textblock? I want to scale down the font size. Using the font-size: 10pt property of a simple textblock, the font becomes smaller, but the text is not shorter. Is there a way to scale down the font size or do I need to take the font size of the textblock as is and create a smaller textblock programmatically. A: If you want to change the font size of the text block without changing the actual text, you can change the font size from code-behind using LayoutTransform. This example scales the font size for the entire control. The X and Y values can be changed to move the entire text block on the X and Y axes. Create a new page with the following: In the code behind, add the following code (you need the using...statements to include the namespaces):

public partial class MyPage : Page
    public MyPage()
        InitializeComponent();
        StringFormat format = new StringFormat();
        format.LineAlignment = StringAlignment.Center;
        format.FormatFlags = StringFormatFlags.DirectionResponsive;
        StringFormat _format = new StringFormat();
        _format.LineAlignment = StringAlignment.Center;
        _format.FormatFlags = StringFormatFlags.DirectionResponsive;
        _format.LineAlignment = StringAlignment.Near;
    }

"Well, the truth is we will not be playing as a boat club, we are a swimming club," said 33-year-old Lang, the first joint winner of a Commonwealth Games gold medal. "We have gotten so used to being in the boat that it will be difficult to move to swimming. "I think we are going to have to raise our level of competition a level. In swimming we have a number of all-Albanian teams who are the top in their countries. I think that our athletes will get to compete at their potentials." Lang, who grew up in the eastern Mediterranean coastal town of Saranda, one of the closest swim offshoots from Pristina, has been a swimmer since she was six. She won her first medal, a bronze, in the 100m freestyle at the World University Games in 2005, but claims no one paid much attention to her until she started competing at the 2007 European Championships in the 800m freestyle. It was at that tournament that Lang's manager, Mohamed Sami, suggested she run in the marathon in Athens to aid her recovery from a tough 1500m freestyle showdown with European rival Natalya Arkhipova. She opted for the longer race, finished fifth in 2:21:39 and won a 10,000m bronze behind Arkhipova and Moroccan runner Amine Khazoua. Lang signed to an agent and was shocked to get an invitation to the 2008 Olympic Trials, where she finished 14th in the 10,000m final. She came sixth at the 2009 World Championship in Rome and was ranked No6 in the world. She believes what she did in Rome - a personal best of 7:42.32 in the marathon, which included a 5km stretch where she was swimming with the current - made her Olympic dream more tangible. "I'm now at the age I should have been in Athens, but we didn't have a good team and didn't have enough money to support us," said Lang, who is a sideline businesswoman with a company that manufactures nuts and vegetables. "I had more than enough money to support me in those Olympics, but I didn't have enough time or energy. Even now I have time, energy and I'm ready. "I believe I can bring a medal to the Olympics. I have the physical ability but it is about mental strength. It is about not losing the race in
