To access the Editing pane, click the Edit, Edit Smart, or Image Bin icon at the bottom of the Layers panel to open the Layers panel. Then open an image. Managing Layers A layer is the building block of Photoshop. Photoshop layers enable you to create multiple versions of an image without showing the changes on the computer screen. You can then decide which layers to keep or modify and create a new image by combining the layers. Creating new layers When you first open Photoshop, two tools that you can use to create layers are the Quick Selection tool and the Magic Wand tool (see Figure 2-3). The Quick Selection tool is used for selecting parts of an image. The Magic Wand tool is designed for finding objects that match a preset shape, color, or density. The Magic Wand tool turns the cursor into a magic wand, which you click and drag through an image to select areas of the same specified characteristics. Because the tool automatically highlights all pixels that match the shape, colors, and density, you get a lot of no-brainers to select. --- Figure 2-3: The Quick Selection and Magic Wand tools work together for selecting objects. To select areas of an image with the Quick Selection tool, follow these steps: 1. Select the Quick Selection tool (it appears in the Tools panel as a square with an arrow pointing down) and then click anywhere in the image. Alternatively, you can click the triangle that appears in the Tools panel when you select the Quick Selection tool. This opens the Quick Selection Options dialog box, as shown in Figure 2-4. Use the Quick Selection Options dialog box to select what areas of the image are selected. (I cover the options for the Quick Selection tool in Chapter 4.) 2. In the selection mode area of the Quick Selection Options dialog box (see Figure 2-4), press and hold the spacebar or click the arrow to the right of the text and then choose one of the selection modes: • Active selection: This automatically highlights all objects that fall within the boundaries of the selection that you create. When you release the mouse button, the object is included in the selection. • Object selection: Choose this selection mode to select objects that are either by themselves or grouped. Use the mouse buttons to select individual objects or objects that fall into a series. 3. To include or exclude areas of the image, enter the Start and

Q: iPhone: Send notification at specific time I want to send notification to user at specific time, For example, user open the app, notification will appear. How can I do this? A: EDIT: I have implemented application server, and now it is quite easy to achieve the effect you want. In the application startup, first I write the application's current date and time to the keychain. Then, when the app receives a notification, send the date and time it was sent to the server, the server will then compare the current time to the date/time it received. If the current time exceeds the date/time sent, it will then send a message to the user. First, you need to setup your application server and write a server that will accept the notification and request for the content for the message. You can easily setup and run a server in XCode, just like many other services. Then, you need to do two things in your application: Save the date of notification to the keychain Define a local notification when the notification is received - (void)applicationDidEnterBackground:(UIApplication *)application { CFDateRef notificationDate = (CFDateRef)CFBridgingRetain([NSDate date]); //Save the date to the keychain [NSKeyedArchiver archiveRootObject:notificationDate toFile:nil]; [UIApplication sharedApplication].applicationIconBadgeNumber = 0; } - (void)applicationDidBecomeActive:(UIApplication )application { NSString notificationKey = @"UserNotificationService"; NSData* notificationDateData = (NSData*)CFBridgingRetain([NSData dataWithBytes:&application.applicationIconBadgeNumber length:sizeof(application.applicationIconBadgeNumber) options:0]); NSKeyedUnarchiver* unarchiver = [[NSKeyedUnarchiver alloc] initForReadingWithData:notificationDateData]; CFTypeRef notificationDate = [unarchiver decodeObjectForKey:notificationKey]; [unarchiver finishDecoding]; //Check if the notification is sent before the application is launched
