What's New in the Akrapovic Windows 7 Theme?

Akrapovic exhaust systems have received many World Championship titles, especially since Igor Akrapovic's first race. First prize came in 1981 with his Honda, by which he came third in the 125cc Moto class. In 1983, 1985, 1986 and 1987, he won the World Championship with Honda. The title was contested against other manufacturers, including BMW, Honda and Yamaha. For the 1990s, and especially for the 1990s, Honda dominated the circuit. The best Japanese riders won almost all titles, sometimes even more than one of each for the same rider. At Suzuka, Kawasaki won 13 titles in a row, for example. A small Italian motorcyclist rider, Aldo Costa, never lost the title to the Japanese and reached the top of the ladder for most of the 1990s. Ducati also had players on the other side, with Valentino Rossi and Nicky Hayden. The win-loss record of the Ducati team was marred by constant technical failures. In 2004, it was a contest of Honda and Yamaha, just like the one between Honda and Yamaha a few years earlier, both of which had won the title for years. In 2005, Yamaha won the titles once again. Two German riders, Paul Smart and Ben Spies, won the championship in this year. 2006 did not mark the same success story, with the return of Yamaha and the arrival of Jorge Lorenzo. 2007 was an alternating success story. In 2008 and 2011, the title was won by Valentino Rossi and Dani Pedrosa. In 2009, the Portuguese rider Dani Pedrosa and the Italian rider and team manager Jorge Lorenzo shared the MotoGP title. In 2010, the series was won by Marc Marquez, who now holds the title until the end of the season. 2012 saw a fantastic end to the season with the arrival of Ducati and the change in design of the frame. In 2013, still with a new frame, it is Yamaha's Valentino Rossi who tops the table. And of course, in 2014, the Italian rider is back on top as he wins the championship. Akrapovic have also won the over 125cc Supersport World Championship, which they have done between 1997 and 2009. During the period from 1997 to 2000, the title was won by the man who is now famous, John Kocinski. In 2001, he was succeeded by Timo Scheider. The return to these two champions was not unexpected, as for the last
