Each version of Photoshop has added new features that simplify a variety of common tasks. For example, version 4 introduced the History palette, which makes easy a task that was previously complicated. Newer versions added layers, animation, the Layer Styles panel, image recognition, and the Content-Aware Move tool. Image Tools The appearance of an image is influenced by the tools used to create it. Image tools are used to create or alter layers, adjust color, and shape selections. There are two types of tools: Raster tools: Raster tools are those used to create and edit the bitmap image by adding lines, shapes, and text elements (a raster). In this way, the image is constructed bit by bit, pixel by pixel, layer by layer. Vector graphics tools: Vector tools modify the image by creating paths, curves, and shapes. Vector tools are used to adjust colors and create patterns. Choosing an Image Processing Program for Photo Work The photo industry is demanding, so image processing software designed for the industry is now available that features advanced features such as: Clarity — Clarity products let you quickly and easily remove unwanted objects from a shot, such as people who are in a portrait and unwanted objects such as things in the background. Correction — Correction products, such as Lightroom, are used to fix image problems such as color, tone, and exposure. Cropping — Cropping products let you crop individual images, either on the fly or in a batch, either to remove unwanted parts or to have more or less of an image than it originally had. Retouching — Retouching products, such as Lightroom, are used to improve images by reducing, eliminating, and/or adding features to a photo. Each of these software programs is designed to help you do some aspect of image processing. So which one is best for you? How much time do you spend in Photoshop, Lightroom, or any other program? In choosing image-editing software for yourself, you have to determine a little bit of research about what you want to do with your photo and the software's capabilities. One version of Photoshop may be great for one kind of photo editing and not be at all suited to the needs of another kind of image manipulations you want to do. When choosing software for your photo work, one of the most important tasks is to find out what else is available in

The authors present results of two cross-sectional surveys of insecticide-treated net (ITN) use in rural Haiti conducted in 2000 and 2001, respectively, and a series of follow-up studies conducted after 2001 to assess the sustainability of the 2000-2001 survey results. The overall ITN coverage in 2000-2001 was 49%, and there was a greater reduction in coverage from 2000 to 2001 compared with that from 1999 to 2000. The 2000-2001 ITN coverage was greater among households with larger sleeping rooms, insecticide net purchase, and experience in net ownership; less likely among females, those without children under 5 years of age, and those living in larger households; and increased in those living in districts with the highest malaria incidence. Following the survey, the ITN coverage was reinforced by community health volunteers in rural communities, and the use of ITNs by pregnant women was promoted in antenatal care clinics. Sustained improvements in use of ITNs among pregnant women can be achieved through well-coordinated efforts on multiple fronts, such as routine household visits, targeting pregnant women, and community-based health education.Q: SQL Server and SQL Azure Connection Modes I have a SQL Server instance on an Azure server, and I'm trying to connect to the database from C# on my desktop. I've set up the connection on the server, but when I try to run a query to the database it throws a timeout error (the server is down). Here's what I have in my connection string: Data Source=SERVER-NAME;Initial Catalog=D

ICYMI: If you want your Comcast's customer service to work, you need to speak very clearly, then use an accent to make sure you're really understood. That's the idea behind a post on the Ask Reddit community today, which shows how a French-speaking person uses an American accent in a chat with Comcast customer service. The Redditors humorously tell the tale as a customer service rep can't understand the accent and they offer a possible resolution. (They don't actually work together to solve it, but the result is a game of telephone.) Chau Guv-nah? It goes like this: "Comcast, my friend, is the best internet service provider," declares the customer service rep on the phone. "What do you mean the best internet service provider?" asks the Reddit user. "I can see everything on your screen, and you can watch all the videos I show to my friends. I make videos with my phone, and when I upload them to Youtube, I can make it all public. They have over 100 channels, and I watch all of them. I can even do commentaries on the movies, and my friends who live in other parts of the world, in other countries, can see them." The customer service rep hears this all. Then, the phone goes silent as the Reddit user converses with him, demonstrating a near perfect American accent. "I've been with Comcast for 20 years. Your service is so great. I went to another company when I built a house and had horrible internet service. Thank you for making things better. Please give me a discount on my bill. I'm your biggest customer." After a couple of minutes, the customer service rep comes back on the line. "Comcast should give you a 10-20% discount on your bill, because you're our biggest customer. I don't know how much your bill is, but I can tell you that I love my job and I want to continue doing it for many years to come." What's In It For Me? If the above situation is similar to your own, there's a good chance that you will have a quick, go-to solution to come up with. A lot of Redditors have had this experience, having already had to deal with a high-pressure sales presentation from a customer service rep. "It's funny how in customer service
