----- Wikimedia Commons' database contains a lot of valuable content for Wikipedia, that it is very difficult to find online. Wikipedians have created a web site for such content, called Commons, and the database that contains all the content created there is called MediaWiki. Wiki Article Saver is a Windows tool for Windows XP, Windows Vista and Windows 7 that saves wikipedia articles to a local machine without a network connection. You can browse the online wikipedia articles easily but you have to carry around the site's HTML files everywhere. Wiki Article Saver will save wikipedia articles to your desktop, so that you can view them offline. Also you can save the articles you are viewing locally. Download Wiki Article Saver from www.appbrain.com and try it out. If you like the tool you can donate for me. Note: If you donate to me. Please confirm that your gift is to the Wiki Article Saver project, rather than to me personally. Wiki Article Saver ----- Wiki Article Saver is freeware. Wiki Article Saver does not produce any noise (EXE or so) as it is not a Windows program, but it may cause system problems if you have a lot of Windows processes running. This may happen in Windows Vista (that uses Windows XP style handles and a lot of services by default) or Windows 7 that uses Windows 7 style handles and a limited number of services by default. If you see the message: "Unable to create file; file size is above the maximum file size allowed" with other error message, please try to close all process and open again, also make sure the browser window that is using Wiki Article Saver is minimized or shut down completely. Wiki Article Saver works only with Windows XP, Windows Vista and Windows 7 and supports MS SQL compact database. Wiki Article Saver means Online ----- Wiki Article Saver is not an offline tool, it is a web browser. It saves wikipedia articles online to the hard disk and retrieves the articles from the hard disk. The article stored locally, in our case a desktop, is linked to a database file.
