It can handle a range of file formats as well as full-color and black-and-white. Elements includes features to create and edit frames as well as thousands of clips and frames that you can use to design layouts. As with Illustrator, a design can involve hundreds of elements that you insert into a canvas. * * * # Warning! Even a simple image can be sliced and diced Photoshop is full of amazing design features, but using them to create a complex, page-sized image is risky. Cut out a tiny square from a huge image and you may lose some of the design information. Cut out a small square from a huge image and you may chop or smear design elements. I recommend using the Cutout tool for any task involving creating your own frame or a `.png` file. The Cutout tool lets you remove a graphic object from a background and save it as a single file, so you don't have to worry about losing any more information than necessary. * * * * _Windows: _ `www.dummies.com/go/elements` *_Mac: _ `www.dummies.com/go/elementsmac` ## Creating Simple Documents This program enables you to create documents for fax, email, and other printer-friendly formats that can be printed in a matter of seconds. Q: Making a WKInterfaceTable have dynamic cells This seems like it ought to be really simple, but it's not working. I've got a WKInterfaceTable filled with cells. I've added an outlet that is set to the appropriate table cell (this works). In the cellForRowAtIndexPath: method I'm testing (this works) and in the numberOfRowsInSection: method I'm testing (doesn't work) to see if the table has enough cells. However, every time I run the app, the count is always zero. There's no error in the console. The console shows that there are 16 elements in the array (each cell is an element of the array). But when the app runs the first time, the count is zero. When I reload the app (by clicking home) the count is 16. When I click the cell, the count is zero again. The Interface Builder file is very simple: (I added a Button in the same view controller. When I click the button, I change the variable that is sent to tableView:cellForRowAtIndexPath: to 1 and try running the app again. It works fine. The count is 16.) Code that would not work: - (CGFloat)tableView:(UITableView *)tableView heightForRowAtIndexPath:(NSIndexPath *)indexPath{ int i = 0; int ii = 0; TableViewCell *cell = [tableView cellForRowAtIndexPath:indexPath]; NSLog(@"cell.tag = %i", cell.tag); NSLog(@"numberOfRowsInSection: %i", [tableView numberOfRowsInSection:indexPath.section]); NSLog(@"i = %i", i); NSLog(@"ii = %i", ii); if (cell.tag == 1) { ii = 1; } else { ii
