As an example of the valve head, there is a valve head that is formed of a valve core and a valve seat portion, and movably disposed in a lateral direction of the fluid passage. In order to reduce the weight of the valve head that includes a valve body and a valve core, the valve core is formed of low thermal conductive metal (e.g., aluminum alloy). In a conventional technique, for example, a valve head is provided with a cylindrical core hole through which a first stopper is screwed, and a second stopper is disposed at a bottom portion of the core hole. A thermal insulation material is applied to a bottom surface of the second stopper to thermally insulate a bottom surface of the valve head (refer to Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2014-143205). In this technique, when the first stopper is fixed to the core hole by screwing a first threaded portion provided on an outer circumferential surface of the first stopper to the core hole, the second stopper is moved downwardly with respect to the core hole. In this case, the thermal insulation material is compressed between the bottom surface of the second stopper and the bottom surface of the core hole.American Swimming League The American Swimming League is
