Is it possible to use some advance method to unlock a BootCamp harddisk on Mac? If you use a Mac other than a MacBook Pro (10,1) with an SSD, you may still have to have a traditional hard disk configured in BootCamp on. I used BootCamp Assistant to prepare the USB flash disk drive for you. You can use it on Mac OS X Lion (or you should download the latest version of Mac OS X Lion, where is the download link) and try to boot on it. BootCamp, but you can try it. You can still have a traditional hard disk configured in BootCamp (older version) and you can still use the BootCamp Assistant and configure it. Restart to the BootCamp and use the following option to make sure it is working. For Lion Mac OSX, in your menu bar go to 'Apple->Utilities->Boot Camp Assistant For Lion, this will open the Boot Camp Assistant, and follow these steps. Step 1. Connect the Mac with a USB flash disk to your computer. Step 2. Click on the "Install" button, navigate to the boot camp disk and select the disk. . . Step 3. Click on the "Install" button. Step 4. At this step, you can do a screen check. You should see that you have a new partition on your hard disk. If it's good, go to step 5. Step 5. Select "Something else", and create a new partition on the Mac hard disk. Step 6. (Optional) For Lion users, set the "File system" to "Extended Journaled" (best) or "Journaled" (second best). Step 7. Click on the "Install" button. . . Step 8. Now you have to tell the Mac what to boot in the main case, so it will boot up on the Mac. Step 9. Click on the "Apple", select "EFI Boot" and set it to "EFI/Boot/boot.efi". . . Step 10.
