Approximately 35% of individuals over the age of 65 will have one or more symptoms of cognitive impairment and of those, 40% will have mild cognitive impairment (MCI). While about 10-20% of people over the age of 65 will have dementia, only 2-5% will develop Alzheimer's disease, the most common type of dementia. Alzheimer's disease (AD) is a progressive neurodegenerative disease and is the sixth leading cause of death in the US. AD is the only chronic neurological disease for which there is no cure. There is no way of reliably diagnosing AD at the presymptomatic stage. The diagnosis is made in the clinic, through the interpretation of a series of neurological tests; presently there are no objective diagnostic tests. The cardinal features of AD are progressive cognitive decline, with loss of memory, language, reasoning and judgment, and finally loss of skills necessary for independent living. Prevalence rates are highest in those over 85 years of age, and are estimated to be more than 20% in individuals over age 85.
