Neurons carrying primary afferent input from algescic and non-algescic nociceptors in the dorsal horn of the spinal cord. Algescic and non-algescic nociceptors have been defined according to their ability to activate group IV muscle afferents in frog. These muscle afferents, as well as other putative algescic group IV afferents, in turn, have been shown to activate neurons in the dorsal horn in a manner which distinguishes algescic from non-algescic inputs. These dorsal horn neurons are among the principal output neurons in the spinal cord and are considered to be the primary input neurons to the brain from the algescic system. Algescic group IV muscle afferent terminals are located primarily in laminae I-II and IV-V, and non-algescic group IV muscle afferent terminals are in laminae I-III and IV-V. It has been proposed that algescic group IV muscle afferents are located within laminae IV-V, and are involved in long-term synaptic plasticity as well as in the sensitization of spinal cord input neurons. We have investigated whether algescic and non-algescic group IV muscle afferents can be differentiated on the basis of their morphology and their location relative to principal neurons in the dorsal horn of the spinal cord. The algescic group IV muscle afferent terminals have been shown previously to be located in laminae IV-V, and thus, neurons which receive input from this region are a candidate for being principal input neurons to the brain from the algescic system. We have identified several principal neurons in laminae III and V which receive primary afferent input from algescic and non-algescic group IV muscle afferents. The principal neurons are located in close proximity to the algescic group IV terminals, and their axons project in the ipsilateral direction. 5ec8ef588b
