It’s just a blob of white gas in a blue tent hanging on a pink balloon next to a tree. But the fact that it’s there is testament to the ingenuity of the effort. “The hardest thing is not to get the creativity out of the volunteers,” warns Alex. “You can’t stop them from brainstorming ways to promote the event.” And it’s not just the balloons that are working. The film crew even managed to persuade over 100 live lobsters to cheer up the road at a traffic light and get some aerial shots. Up to 150 volunteers are expected to turn out to the events – and, with the support of a strong local team and a great video and digital marketing effort, Alex believes it could be a night to remember. “We’ve got a website, an Facebook page and a YouTube channel, and we’re pushing it hard in the media. f988f36e3a
