The only good thing about the widespread protests in France is that they forced President François Hollande to come out and “discuss” the subject of Islam. Hollande was uncomfortable discussing Islam, so he went to meet with the protesters to listen to their problems. He will “discuss” the problem with them in about three months. He will put the problem on a mental shelf and forget about it. This is not the first time that a French president was forced to address Islam by violent protests. In May of 2011, it was the Islamic riots of the banlieus. The same scenario played out in 2005, 2004 and 2001. The French president will listen and “discuss” the problem in about three months. He will put the problem on a mental shelf and forget about it. And that is the only good thing that came from the protests. I have not seen the video of Hollande’s remarks, but I can easily imagine that what he f988f36e3a
