Generally speaking, lock-up clutches are interposed in the drive system of a vehicle in order to improve the energy-saving characteristics thereof and reduce the pumping losses of a torque converter, thereby enhancing the fuel economy of the vehicle. However, a lock-up clutch can be placed in a friction engagement device and/or a mechanical energy transmission system, with the friction engagement device being set in a slip condition, and one example being a slip-plate clutch. The lock-up clutch is also usually used in the case of a vehicle having an automatic transmission, etc. In consideration of this, two lock-up clutches (for a lock-up clutch arrangement) are provided in a power transmission system in order to perform, in combination, the double-effect operation and the lock-up clutch arrangement, although only one lock-up clutch is necessary. However, a problem exists with the known technology in that the temperature of the double lock-up clutch is inevitably increased with the double-effect operation. In consideration of this, it is an object of the present invention to provide a multi-structure device which can control the temperature of a rotary member in a friction engagement device for the purpose of realizing a friction engagement device, etc., that is capable of performing the double-effect operation and the lock-up clutch arrangement.[Resectoscopic removal of postoperative proctocolectomy cuff failure]. Refractory cystitis after restorative proctocolectomy for ulcerative colitis is a frequent complication with a high morbidity. Different surgical treatments are reported in the literature, but the procedure of choice is still debated. We describe a case of cuff leak after restorative proctocolectomy for ulcerative colitis after the failure of two transanal stenting procedures. The surgical management consisted in an intracorporeal suture of the edges of the cuff after rectal wall excision. This technique, previously described by Braga and Muñoz in 2005, is safe and efficacious, requiring only a short learning curve.[The immunophenotypic profile of acute lymphoblastic leukemia cells]. To investigate the immunophenotypic profile of acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL) cells. The immunophenotypic profile of ALL
